In an innovative step to protect the local rivers from pollution during Durga Puja celebration the Itanagar Municipal Corporation dug a large artificial pond at the Nyokum ground in Jullang to serve as a designated site for immersion of idols. Mayor Tamme Phassang has urged all puja committees and residents to "use this eco-friendly alternative instead of rivers for idol immersion." The initiative is aimed at preserving cultural traditions while minimizing environmental impact. Phassang added that the IMC had previously faced funding cuts and penalties due to pollution-related issues. The new approach aligns with the National Green Tribunal's and the pollution board's guidelines.
